Starlight

the shimmer of the sun glancing off your smile amplifying the troubling glint in your eye laser intense infliction of a wound I am stricken and brought to my knees then stumbling on hoping on hope

my knowlege of your love is sound the trembling betrays my lack of belief despite contrarian outcrys and the protest of committment my very being is accusing all of humanity and you condemning me the belief that I and all who are me are inherently unlovable doomed to the capitualation of pity recycling love from the waste picking up the scraps of those who burst into flames lighting up the night into day with their solar passion endless energy of fusion of the light of two souls entwining and combining the interplay of shadow and light creating more than the sum of the two feeding and hungering spewing into the universe binaries

a pair of stars in the heavens bonded by unseen forces spinning into eternity

bound and alone
